Dignity through the eyes of children

WHAT better way to learn and spread dignity than through the eyes of the innocent and sincere child. Global Dignity Day, first celebrated in 2006, aimed to instill new, positive, inclusive and an interconnected sense of value in young people, has included Malaysia to its 50-strong country participation, with Beaconhouse Malaysia in the fore.

Quek Sue Yian, children's rights advocate and celebrated author of children's books such as "Do Noses Grow Long When Lies Are Told" and "Kailash", joined hands with the school, to author a book based on Global Dignity and its five principles. The book will be a learning tool and shared, throughout all Beaconhouse schools, along with homes for under-served children around the country.

Under this initiative, Beaconhouse commissioned five local illustrators to work with their 5 to 6 year-old students, to get the interpretation of "the principles" from these young minds. The illustrators - Magic Marvin, CK Koh, Weili Wonka, Chan Pei Yee and Sandra Khoo, worked with these children through an art workshop conducted at various Beaconhouse centres. The book will be distributed throughout Beaconhouse schools and centres by early next year.

The Global Dignity Day's values align closely with Beaconhouse's mission in bringing benefit to the students, community and wider world.
